

This work describes the effect of laser cut parameters on polymers during laser micromachining. Laser cut parameters influence the accuracy and quality of cut. A comprehensive methodology of modelling and analysis of the cut parameters is outlined. The effect of varying cut parameters on the bulge formation is also analyzed. With the gained knowledge, the reader can achieve the best possible laser cut parameters to ensure optimum cut.

Rehema Ndeda

Rehema Ndeda is a Lecturer at Jomo Kenyatta University of Agriculture and Technology. She holds a Masters degree in Mechatronic Engineering. Her research interests include Computational Modeling and Simulation, Laser Micromachining and Materials Characterization and Processing.

978-3-8484-3925-6

Rehema Ndeda
James Keraita
Paul Kioni

Effect of Cut Parameters on Laser Micromachining of Polymers

Case Study on Bulge Formation

 LAMBERT
Academic Publishing